

APPLYING TO THE DOCTOR OF PHILOSOPHY (PHD) PROGRAM

A Research-Focused Doctoral Degree

The OHSU School of Nursing offers an innovative mentored education program leading to the Doctor of Philosophy (PhD) degree. The recently redesigned curriculum emphasizes seminar courses focused on individual learning to nurture students in their progression from novice to scholar. The coursework is offered face-to-face in the classroom on the Portland campus.

PhD coursework and mentored research opportunities are designed to provide a solid foundation in nursing science, methodology, and scholarship while focusing on the development of each student's individual abilities and research interests. Students usually complete core PhD courses in 2 years. Although part-time study can be arranged, it is not recommended. At the conclusion of year 2, students are typically ready to defend their dissertation proposal. Students then conduct an independent, but mentored, research study, write a dissertation, and earn the PhD degree. Two options are available for the dissertation: a traditional format or a manuscript-based integrated dissertation.

The PhD program offers a post-baccalaureate as well as a post-graduate option for those with a master's degree or higher. Students who enter the PhD program with a bachelor's degree must take an additional 12 credits of elective courses; otherwise the curriculum is the same. Preference is given to nursing applicants, but is open to applicants from related disciplines.

OHSU School of nursing participates in Western Regional Graduate Program so PhD students from WICHE states can pay resident tuition. For eligible states visit:
